

INT. LIVING ROOM - DAY

Filmed like an Up-Scale Infomercial, with the character speaking directly to the camera.

SELLER

Oh, hello. I'm going to pretend I didn't see you there, and not question the reason why you are in my living room. Because I am going to sell you something. And to hide that painfully obvious fact, we will change camera angles to distract you, and make us look more dynamic. Now I am going to list a bunch of really broad symptoms that happen to everyone in their life time. And then say the only solution is my product. Ooo, another camera change. And now I am going to tell you that you can't live without my product because it will solve all your problems, but wait right at the end there will be a super fast read of fine print that will tell you this is all bullshit. Ooo, camera angle change. Now I will give you a number, that is complicated and you will have to pause the screen to write it down, and then to get your palms sweating with this bullshit, I will tell you you only have 20 minutes before this fucked up offer is gone. And this is another angle, because we are running out of money for any graphics. So don't buy this ad, be a smart person and now you've wasted 60 seconds of your life. Have a great day.

END